How I See It. By: Brian Gregory

As many of you know, last week I got to spend a total of eight days on a mission trip to the Caribbean island of Bonaire. What a privilege it was to be part of this group. Our efforts were led and coordinated by our Youth Minister, Jody Pritchett. Although Jody has personally made twenty-five – thirty missions trips, this was his first time leading and organizing a group. Jody did a fantastic job and I am thankful for his efforts and hard work.

Our group left Columbia Friday morning around 1:45 A.M. and then drove to Atlanta where we boarded a plane for Aruba. From there we flew to Bonaire where we finally arrived around 8:30 P.M. where we met up with a small group from Parsons Church of Christ. The next day we began the task of completing many work projects around the church building. Over the next few days we poured a sidewalk and completed several big painting projects. On Wednesday night we helped to conduct a VBS. Overall about fifteen children came and each of them had a great time.

The church in Bonaire is very small. Not including Martin Klamm (the Missionary) and his family of five, there are less than ten adult members with several children attending also. On the Sunday we were there only two of those adults came to worship. When the Klamm's first moved to Bonaire, a few Christians were meeting primarily under a tree in one sister's yard. Soon they moved to the community center, but were often forced to worship at his house if someone else was using it. This instability over where to meet each week hindered the work for a while. The local government approached Martin about giving him some property to build a church building on. Over the past two years, Martin has been forced to focus upon the completion of the building and do a lot of the work himself. With groups coming occasionally to help him, every project completed puts him one step closer to being finished. In the next few months he will be finished and be able to focus upon evangelizing the island.

Overall this trip really opened my eyes to a lot of things. It made me look at how others live throughout the world. Believe it or not you can live and live quite well without "most" of the things we think we must have to survive. It also made me think seriously about my personal commitment to Christ. As I heard about and saw some of the frustrations and setbacks of the work there, I have to say I would likely have left by now. The Klamm's have given up lots of things we take for granted (i.e. A.C., T.V. channels, extended family and friends, etc. . .) to go live in a place where they did not speak the language, know anyone or even have a place to worship in doors all for the cause of Christ. With this in mind ask yourself what I have been forced to ask myself, "What have I given up for Christ?" "How committed am I to Christ?"

Building Fund Campaign:

GOAL= $600,000 August 31, 2011 - March 31, 2012
July and August have been designated as commitment months. The elders need to know how much the congregation is willing to commit to the building project to be able to make decisions on which stage of completion they will pursue. They are asking that you print your commitment on the envelopes provided and place in the collection plate when it is passed around. (Name is optional)

Summits of the Psalms

By: Joe Macer

Psalm 78

78:4 We will not hide them from their children; we will tell the next generation the praiseworthy deeds of the Lord, his power, and the wonders he has done.

This Psalm recalls much of the history of Israel as they were led by Moses. The plagues are recalled as well as God's leading in the wilderness and the Psalm concludes with David on the throne. The writer has two purposes in mind as he wrote. The first was to remember what God had done and the second was to warn against rebellion towards God.

We have an obligation to tell each and every generation what God has done throughout the ages. Even today we need to tell about the ten plagues that God brought upon Egypt through the hands of Moses. Much is to be learned by seeing how God dealt with his people and other nations. Today we need to add to these Old Testament accounts the information about Jesus and his life on earth as well as his gift of salvation. We have the responsibility to pass this on from generation to generation. The Apostle Paul told Timothy to pass the gospel on to reliable men who would pass it on to others. Mothers and fathers are we impressing God's word upon our children?

We also must warn every generation about leaving God. Many would say that if they had seen these things with their own eyes then they would believe. Since they have not seen with their own eyes they do not believe. This is not sound reasoning. The children of Israel who saw the miracles in a short time rebelled against God by building the golden calf. People saw Jesus perform miracles and refused to believe. Seeing isn't always believing. Are we warning this generation about rebelling against God? Do we present the consequences shown within God's word? Let's always make it our goal to tell of God's good deeds and warn about failing to follow him.

July Theme: Let the word dwell in you.

Goal: Share the scriptures. Read, study, and apply the scriptures that inspire your fellow Christians.

REJOICE! We rejoice with Shelby Anderson who was baptized Sunday morning. We commend her for her love for the Lord, tender heart, and desire to be a Christian.
