The fall season is finally upon us. It is always great to experience the change in every season. I personally love this time of year when we finally get a break from the heat. While we have natural explanations for the timing of the seasons (i.e., the rotation and tilting of the earth, etc. . . .) we often overlook the fact or at least take it for granted, this is all part of God's promised order (Gen. 1:14-19). As part of His creation, he set in order many natural laws to govern the universe and life itself. Scientist in so many ways are just now beginning to scratch the surface of what God has done.

Although some prefer summer and others prefer fall, let's take time to reflect upon God's amazing power no matter what the season is.
